Invitation from the President

It is with great pleasure that I invite you to join us at our Fourth Australian Women Lawyers National Conference to be held in Canberra, 10-12 August 2012.

Our theme is Women Lawyers in a Public World, and AWL is able to celebrate our own role with Australia's new Global Ambassador for Women and Girls, Ms Penny Williams, speaking just shy of the first anniversary of her appointment. AWL called for the creation of such a post advising on issues impacting on women's status and wellbeing in Australia and internationally in our June 2008 Conference Communiqué.

AWL recognises the unique challenges for women within the legal profession, and the importance of our presence to advance justice and equality, whilst representing the whole of the community. We are delighted to bring you an update on the ANU's Trailblazing Women and the Law project, and on the NSW Law Society's Advancement of Women in the Legal Profession and ECU's and WA Law Society's Workplace Bullying in the Legal Profession reports. This conference will also discuss surviving and thriving as a woman in the law, whilst valuing the fact that a number of women lawyers practice in rural, regional and remote areas.

Embracing the public world around us, the conference also reflects contemporary and often difficult issues. We have sessions on Intellectual Property rights from a music industry and broadcasting perspective; Construction lessons following the Christchurch earthquake and Social Media. It is our honour to highlight some outstanding contributions being made by female practitioners in these areas.

I look forward to welcoming you all in Canberra this August.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

The advancement and retention of women lawyers is a complex issue - consider the following excerpts from the Law Society of NSW's report on the Advancement of Women in the Profession:

"Overall, it appears that there is little difference between the rates at which men and women solicitors leave the profession. However, analysis of each segment of practice suggests that more young women solicitors are leaving private practice than young men and that some of these women appear to be moving to in-house roles."

"My firm has tried to offer partnerships to women who have knocked them back. We have spoken to our staff to find out what they want and have tried offering extended maternity leave, job sharing, part time work and a variety of other flexible work arrangements. The reasons why women turn down partnership are not always obvious."

Women and the Law in Australia

Edited by Easteal, P (Editor) and expert legal contributors

The first of its kind, Women and the Law in Australia provides practical advice on dealing with issues in the practice of law that are of specific importance to women. It is intended not just to highlight the problems that women experience with the legal system as defendants, complainants, victims, witnesses and practitioners but also to identify pragmatic steps for solicitors, barristers and policy-makers.

The text is a compilation of contributions, with all contributors experts in their area of law, who come from legal practice, academia or government; it explores the cultural and legal context of each topic.
