

Clean Energy Law in Australia

Helping you comply with the Clean Energy Act 2011

The Clean Energy Act 2011 commenced on 2 April 2012, driving a fundamental transformation of the Australian Economy. It requires all liable emitters to comply with the Act, and have in place mechanisms to measure and report liability.

Clean Energy Law in Australia is a complete legal resource on the operation of the Clean Energy Legislative Package, including the National Greenhouse and Energy Reporting Act. This service provides you with a technical and legal analysis of the Clean Energy legislation, to assist you with day-to-day policy-making and compliance operations.

Features and Benefits

- Detailed legal commentary on the full suite of Clean Energy legislation, allowing you to get up-to-speed on all the new Acts and Regulations.
- A resource that brings together legal commentary, legislative policy and regulatory updates in this practice area, providing you with confidence that all the information you need is covered in one place.
- Detailed cross-referencing to Acts and Regulations will assist you to navigate this comprehensive service easily and efficiently.

About the authors

Dr Damien Lockie practises as a barrister and mediator and is recognised as one of Australia's leading experts in emissions trading and clean energy law. Qualified in law and accounting, his experience as a solicitor, accountant and advocate specialising in property and environmental law and federal and state revenue law, is extensive. Damien is an Adjunct Professor of Law at Bond University, where he teaches Clean Energy Law and Environmental Legal Issues. He is the Director of Clean Energy Research in the Centre for Law, Governance and Public Policy.

Contributing authors:

Jeff Lynn, Partner, Ashurst
Elisa de Wit, Partner, Norton Rose
Renee Garner, Corporate Strategy & Advocacy Manager, Energy Australia
Doug Young, Principal, Young Law

Order today

This service is available in an online subscription format which will be updated on an ongoing basis.

There are 3 easy ways for you to subscribe to Clean Energy Law in Australia:

1. Contact your Relationship Manager or
2. Call Customer Relations on 1800 772 772 or
3. Email Customer.Relations@lexisnexis.com.au

For more information visit www.lexisnexis.com.au/cel